4. NOTABLE FEATURES, HISTORICAL SIGNIFICANCE AND DESCRIPTION The Early house is a good example of the use of a mansard roof on a Victorian house. It is three bays long and one deep with a one-story porch on its facade. The balustrade has turned balusters and the roof is supported on champhered square columns, having decorative corner brackets with turned finials hanging between the columns. Also the bracket found in the cornice is used on this cornice. This is all painted white. The main part of the house is clapboard painted greenish-gray and the trim is painted white. Louvered shutters are painted black. Each window has two over two sash and a series of dentils above. The central door has two glass panels in the upper part. In the mansard roof are three small dormers with Jerkins to their "A" roof. The roof is slate with decorative motif throughout. Two white brick chimneys pierce the upper roof about in center of the building. To the east rear is a one-and-a-half-story, three-bay wing, with the same treatment as the forward section. On the east side is a two-story bay window.		3.
